I've lost my marbles, I've lost my marbles

I've lost my marbles - Now What Can I Do?!?!

The door was open when the filaments decided to unfurl

And went a bowling up the sky, I tried, to batter them back in a line

But H2 stole the best of me

Arch eyebrows jackets cufflinks chains

Compartmentalize my brain

But they can never take the memory of

The better man I used to be

The rightly in the rest of me

CHORUS:

If I could take you to

The Mountains of the Moon

Hiding underneath the noonday gloom

You wouldn't have to see me fall here daily

Don't let the ceiling on the wall derail me

Will I return to you

Will they turn the proper screw

Will the morning whistle blow anew

Your every sympathetic look could save me

Don't let the ceiling on the wall derail me

Don't let the ceiling fail me

I've never seen a ceiling fall

I'm never gonna get that far

I've lost my marbles, I've lost my marbles

I've lost my marbles - Now What Can I Do?!?!

In motion memory we all burn

The ball attempts another turn

But as the energies oblige the sky

I'm caught in the blink of an eye

Your ship is sailing out of me

And so I go from day to day
So little reason in the rhyme
With the only consolation prize
As nothing but chemical lies
Souvenirs of symmetry

CHORUS

The operation put the ceiling on the wall...
