I have paced these forests for so long I don't know if I am man or I am beast.

I, though, hold deep within me a quest for revenge.

Then I must be a man as much as I can be.

I have learned to speak the tongue of the animal

I have learned to read the signs in bark and snow.

I have taken within myself the spirits of my fathers,

Long time gone.

In this short time, far from home, a man of Iron I've grown.

A man of Iron I have grown.

A part of the Eternal Woods...

Late evening...

["Just after sunset on his way back to his camp after watching the sun unite]

[with the mountains in the west, he sees the flickering of light between the] [tree trunks. Approaching, he sees an old man sitting calmly by a fire, as] [if waiting for him. His left eye missing. His beard as if gold. The signs]

[on his cloak and hood familiar. The one eyed old man matches the]

[description of the soothsayer, as told by the elders of his village by the] [fires at night when he only a child. The boy, now a young man, eager to] [know, asks the one eyed old man about his dreams.

Dreams he cannot]

[understand. Dreams about strange things he is seeing himself doing. Then]

[the winds that seem to talk to him. Voices that whisper to him behind his] [back. The one eyed old man tells him of the cycles of the stars, of the] [trail of fate and of the valley where time and space

had ceased to exist...]

[where his world ends and the shadows begin. The one eyed old man tells the] [young man that fate has chosen him to interfere with the other world. The] [disturbance is already made. The daughters of the four winds have sold] [themselves to the shadows, distorting the balance of the universe. And the] [one eyed old man says he has seen him come for a thousand years, and that]-acapo
