Tears, just like the jewels
Adorn their corporate crown,
Weigh on me worthless and I
Shake them down and leave now,
And have no royal things.
You, would consecrate the ground,
I paced in pain,
And though those pavements
Caught your sorrow stains.
They fall from me and I say,
Maybe don't fall for anything
That says it's never gonna
Give you everything.
I wish myself into your arms
To know that all I need is everything.
The size of the sea, and the sun in my eyes
And the line in my head,
Yearning for more, only for more.
These days are as bright as the days I have seen
In the wildest of dreams,
Yearning for more, only for more.

I wish myself into your arms

To know that all I need is everything.

Hold back the night, I am tired of my sight

That won't see anymore,

More than today, threatening to stay.

Hold back the night, I am tired of my sight

That won't see anymore,

"Show me you care," is "Show me the door
