So you appear and say how I've grown
And fill me up with faces I've known
In this light they're far from divine
I've saved them up, I'll spend them when I have time
The salted tasted of all your tears and woes
Sent me in haste, my melancholy rose.
Those tasteless lips were closed
You watched me come, you'll see me go.
Once I was happy in happy extremes
Packing my bags for the path of the free
>From pillar to post I am driven it seems
These bitter tokens are worthless to me.
Just like June the curtains are closed
The ghose of shame he sits here and sighs
I'll love the flames like i loved the cold
I'll learn to love the life of the "could I, could I, could I"
So I don't cross my finers any more
You looked for rags and found them at your door
How could you ask for more
Than everything you've heard before?
Once I was happy in happy extremes

Packing my bags for the path of the free

>From pillar to post I am driven it seems

These bitter tokens are worthless to me
