You could never really win
Not to say you're born to lose
You were born to take 10th place
Out of 20 in a field
Mistakes flow through your veins
A mediocre waste
Your life's a living hell
You got gremlins in your blood cells
And monsters in your bed
Are haunting you again
Oh, it must be this place
At least that's what you say, say, say
You don't love you anymore
Cast your demons aside
Getting close enough to know what you're running from
Soon you won't feel this anymore
Cast your demons aside
Getting close enough to know that you're moving on
A fire used to burn
In your heart and in your eyes
You used to dream, you used to care
You used to love, you used to fight
For anything at all
[Demons Lyrics On]
You cover up your bedroom walls
With who you want to be
Now you're afraid to be yourself
And you search the walls for something
You read magazines and watch MTV
You practiced it and everything
Oh, you're dressed to impress
But you look like a drag queen
You don't love you anymore
Cast your demons aside
Getting close enough to know what you're running from
Soon you won't feel this anymore
Cast your demons aside
Getting close enough to know that you're moving on
So keep your head up high
Stretch inches miles
Because Brooklyn wasn't built in just a day

Focus on important things
And be your own guy
Like every ghost that held you down was gone
Getting close enough to know that you're moving on
You don't love you anymore
Cast your demons aside
Getting close enough to know what you're running from
And soon you won't feel this anymore
Cast your demons aside
Getting close enough to know that you're moving on
