Push me out from the darkness
To a sky that's colored blue
Somewhere someone's finding happiness
While I'm still here so hung up on you

Nothing is real
And I want you to know
That I'm not all right
Tear open my chest,
I'll try not to flinch
Won't make promises
I won't make promises
You taught me that.

I'm still losing what's left
Of my self-esteem
And I'm still watching the slow fading
Of all my daydreams

The hardest things to say are the words that mean the most
So I'll bite my tongue 'til it bleeds and I doubt you'll even know
The easiest thinga to fake are feelings to fool someone else
And I've been tricked for so long by you
I spent these last few months in my own hell

A failed apology
A day too late but now I see
That all you really want's to see me dangle neck first from a tree
But what would you need me for
You've got friends galore
And all you've ever been to me is a waste of time and nothing more

Nothing is real (nothing is real)
And I want you to know (and I want you to know)
That I'm not all right (that I'm not all right)
When you tear open my chest, (tear open my chest)
I'll try not to flinch (I'll try not to flinch)

Won't make promises (won't make promises)
I won't make promises (I won't make promises)
You taught me that (you taught me that)

I hate myself
For loving you like this
And I hate myself for hating myself
Just enough to love you
Just enough to love you
