Sometimes in our ignorance, we forget what things are real Searching for our innocence, we forget what things to feel We're all alone at sea sometimes, looking back without regret Reminded of the past sometimes, remembering to not forget Perfection
can never be achieved
Unless we learn how to forgive Through His death we learned to believe Through His life we learned how to live
The Golden Son blows a silver breeze
Through my copper sails
And His water sets me free
A renaissance of life occur s
As the horizon fades into me
Renaissance, renaissance
Renaissance, renaissance
Sail away but not too far Don't be scared to return Understanding who we are Through our mistakes we learn Sometimes the water may get rough Sometimes the water may surround
But sometimes are never always enough
There's always time to find higher ground
The Golden Son blows a silver breeze
Through my copper sails
And His water sets me free
A renaissance of life occurs
As the horizon fades into me
