

Beardfish

"Tall Tales"

Visit "Tall Tales" on MotoLyrics.com

He was remembered by the tall tale he told me, how he sailed the seven seas and back again,
for the record I was easy to persuade,
but when mystic creatures entered in I said,
"ain't no chance that you'd be telling me lies now?"
He just shook his head and told me;
"Oh no, I've met creatures that would make your toes
curl,
men with two heads just like men with no head at all."

I felt cold chills down my spine, his voice echoed in my mind.

There's no reason to fear the world,
when you know all the stories are true,
and if the man on the high horse is a puppet,
could he not be controlled by you?

I met Elanor the witch in a bottle,
how she got inside is still a mystery,
all her fairies worked so hard to redeem her,
she would always sing when a bit afraid,
you see this die that I filled in smoke,
in the bending glance it looked like burning wood,
so right under her small glass cage I stood, smoked my pipe then heard a scream and a mysterious noise.

I felt cold chills down my spine his voice echoed in my mind.

There's no reason to fear the world
There's no reason to fear the world
There's no reason to fear the world
There's no reason to fear the world

Visit Beardfish page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.