They can see the world
In a different light
From the colored room
Of a child's mind
Innocence can keep your thoughts at play
Can you take the time
When the lightning strikes you
To do the things
That you really want to
When reason tells you just to run away
On the echoing green
Life is turned into a dream
On the echoing green
It's something only children see
There's a lonely girl
Who is not alone
In her child's mind
They have all come home
She told you that she still believes in seven
On the echoing green life is turned into a dream
On the echoing green
It's something only children see
