With the world knocking upon your front door
Will you turn the knob?
To face the place you left behind
In order to find
That you are where you want to be
After all you worked so hard for just to see
You've retraced your steps back to me

I will wait tonight
To find a perfect star
To align my eyes with
To keep your stare from me
I will wait tonight
To find a perfect star
To align my eyes with
To keep your, to keep your stare from me

As my world crumbles down around my feet
The ground it shakes
And I am hesitating contemplating
My escape from you
And the lock has rusted out
And I have no more room to doubt
The way you move me
I am moving swiftly away, I am free

I will wait tonight
To find a perfect star
To align my eyes with
To keep your stare from me
I will wait tonight
To find a perfect star
To align my eyes with
To keep your, to keep your stare from me

This night, it covers, every inch of my body
I am safe beneath these gleaming deities
The way you move me, amongst these galaxies we breathe

I will wait tonight
To find a perfect star

To align my eyes with
To keep your stare from me
I will wait tonight
To find a perfect star
To align my eyes with
To keep your, to keep your stare from me
