"Don't Wait"

TBG loves early digital dancehall and its founding artists like Nitty Gritty, Sugar Minott and Tenor Saw.

'Don't Wait' is just a song about going out, finding a girl and dancing with her.

Living life and having a good time. With everybody.
Together

We don't think that just because we have a reggae feel in some of our music that we should preach righteousness, sing about smoking ganja, or pretend to be Bob Marley. Enough people do that already.

It's just a pop song.

nobody move, nobody get hurt girl you will kill me wearing that skirt somebody sink, somebody get high somebody see it with their own two eyes don't say you love me then go to leave me in the morning don't say you need me if you've got nothing here for me wanna hit the party but you might wanna head for home see we're only playing dub we don't play rock and roll

so scandalous
i can't handle this
no philanthropist
girl will tell me if you're wanting to dance to this and romance and hold
maybe chance and fold
maybe it's even in the way that we take it home
and we break inside
it's too late to hide
when every single one of us is the same we tried all the plans to be

all the ways to see when all we ever found was that it was just a dream
so,
don't wake me up
no,
don't wait for me

one in the morning, some typical nights two in the morning, some typical sights three in the morning, surrender control four in the morning, let the bass take hold girl, they could take all that we have and i'd never notice
girl, they could break off every plan, count every vote it's never ending anyway you look at it but, you know we ain't gonna make it far if we don't ever go

so,

up on a beat so scandalous no, don't wait for me.
