it burned our tongues and stomachs when we tried to tame it passed it back a forth the bile that we were tasting ground our teeth to powder nothing ever changes haven't found some solace while my fist continue swinging looking for dead animals the most perverted, twisted form of learning sorry if i hurt you in the middle of the ice striking at the surface frozen, my reflection by any means i'll burn

we said things in the dark past you would deny so i kept my eyes shut tight there's nothing there to prove i cared, now the ugliness i shared i buried safe under the ground not even a scar, barely recollected don't think i should be allowed to forget you shadows i and i confide and made my own

and were not writing to me till the day you showed up the moment you let me in's the minute he slips away but isn't it lonely sitting watch atop his grave?

i don't want to replace what the earth took from you, girl
but you kiss like you're dead already i'm worried
