Talk to her, she yearns for conversation. Arms crossed, foot tapping in frustration. She's getting impatient, thinking, what's gone on here? Take her hand and don't let go. Spin her around like a ballerina. She always dreamed you had it in you. Let her rest her head on your chest. She longs to feel your heart beat. Don't be alarmed if she cries. She loves you, your ballerina loves you. Don't talk about fair, when you haven't even been there. She doesn't see right or wrong or reasons, excuses. She sees red and blue and now you and she wonders if she can forgive again. Take her hand and don't let go. Spin her around like a ballerina. She always dreamed you had it in you. Let her rest her head on your chest. She longs to feel your heart beat. Don't be alarmed if she cries. She loves you, your ballerina loves you. You're a dad now, don't let her down now. Always keep room for her. She's still your baby girl. Just a little older, your ballerina needs you. Take her hand and don't let go. Spin her around like a ballerina. She always dreamed you had it in you. Let her rest her head on your chest. She longs to feel your heart beat. Don't be alarmed if she cries. She loves you, your ballerina loves you. She loves you, your ballerina loves you.
