This is a song about love, and not a very good one I don't know enough to tell you about heartbreak
But I know it's there, and you can avoid it By listening to your head
Which is just what I've done, and it isn't perfect But look what I've done instead, instead of falling for you

I've never really been in love and that is fine by me I'll sit at home and refine the person I want to be 'Cause I'm still young and not prepared to waste my time
On chasing girls who are yet to fully form their minds
And I know that there's a woman waiting, but she's not a woman yet
So I'll wait, and make sure I don't do something I'll regret

This isn't just about love, 'cause that's just one pixel Of the image I'm speaking of, the one of the relationship
That we share, it's much more important That I learn to like you too Though I guess before that, it's probably vital That I try to look for you, at least look for me

I've never really been in love and that is fine by me
I'll sit at home and refine the person I want to be
time
On chasing girls who are yet to fully form their minds
And I know that there's a woman waiting, but she's not
a woman yet
So I'll wait, and make sure I don't do something I'll

I could tell you that I love you all you want till I'm dry But I can't force myself to love you so why should I even try I'll have to wait, and hold my chin up, and plug away at other things Until she comes

And I know that there's a woman waiting, but she's not
a woman yet
So I'll wait, and make sure I don't do something I'll
