What have you done, my little spark?
Cursing my name 'cause again I put you out Falling apart, you tell yourself you are Dreaming only of the ones who never dream of you
Never dreaming of you

But I'm your disappearing one
Vanish when the curtain's drawn
But I will come again, and you will let me in
And you'll see I never disappear for long

Into your room, I stumble now
Too tired to cower, and it's too late to draw you out
And there you lie like a painting of Christ
Bleeding on the heads of the ones who nailed you down
The ones who nailed you down

But I'm your disappearing one
Vanish when the curtain's drawn
But I will come again, and you will let me in
And you'll see I never disappear for long

I'm your disappearing one
Vanish when the curtain's drawn
But I will come again, and you will let me in
And you'll see I never disappear for long
And you'll see I never disappear for long
