Let me tell you about this man who wanted to live a very, very long life so he never smoked, never drank, only put healthy food in his mouth he exercised regularly he had this thing about jogging well, i have to admit, at 33, he had a very nice body that sunday morning, though, his wife tried to hold him up in bed for a cuddle so she started kissing him, nibbling his ear lobe nothing would do

he put on his running gear he put on his running shoes then he started running, when out of the blue

it came bang, bang, bang, bang on the door he never saw the truck that hit him but in the split second before he passed away, he saw all the lives he'd never lived, too scared to hurt his sacred body all the parties he never went to all the girls he never kissed all the laughs he never had the emotions he never felt damn!

now what can you tell me who controls our fate give us just a hint and stop laughing

ant then there was this other man, same age, lived his life to the full parties, jumps, excesses of all kinds, every day had to be special but right before his heart took him away he saw himself growing old thought: man, it would have been so great why wouldn't i just slow down
