Well, I met with at hers
She sang needles and pins
And I was one in a row
Of succeeding kings

And she told me to sit
But there wasn't a chair
And I suddenly scented a smell
Of John Lennon there

So I sat on the floor
For a year or a while
Then she returned with some tea
Or a glass of wine

Lalalalalala it's a game she plays
And I'm a Bambiboy with rubbersoul in my head

Well, she painted my heart
In Bavarian Blue
She said boy, for final and last
Always me and you

But when I woke up early in the morning light
Her face was like a novel no one dread to write
There's a sadness deep in her eyes
There's with a sadness deep in her heart
That kind of sadness that won't go away
It just won't go away

Lalalalalala it's a game she plays
And I'm a Bambiboy with rubbersoul in my head

Well, she stood by the bed
Alka Seltzer in hand
She said thank-you-bye-and-solong
Then her face went blank

She'd need a revolution in her kooky head
But she'll stay inside that house and curl up in her bed
There's a sadness deep in her eyes
There's with a sadness deep in her heart

That kind of sadness that won't go away
It just won't go away

But girl, we will drink our summer wine
Take it to the edge of time
