When it finally collapsed all you heard was the radio static
And the fluttering sound of a bird that was trapped in the attic
But you couldn't be sure that it wasn't just all in your head
As you carefully swept all the broken glass out of your bed

When it finally collapsed all the actors were hotly protested
But the people they had to portray, were a little depressing
So a grass roots initiative based upon sharing and trust Went into production to harness the power of dust

When it finally collapsed as it had been since way before when The pedophiles did their rendition of 'You've Got A Friend'
And everyone had to admit that it wasn't half bad But they still felt uneasy fearing they'd be dismissed as a fad

When it finally collapsed giant billboards made people aware Of the idea that we are comprised of just water and air
And a vandal had written that Jesus knows just how you feel
When you're falling asleep, asleep at the wheel
When you're falling asleep, asleep at the wheel
