a million people walk by, on the street there are stories being told, by their feet the cracks in the window set me free i'm on heroin, eternally religion teaching me who to be there are lies thrown at me, from the age of three there must be something better in this life, i swear i've had it up to here... i remember long ago i was a child pale demons crawled into my bed with a hollow smile but i don't longer really care, i got away i'm through listening to you, d'you hear what i say religion teching me who to be there are lies thrown at me from the age of three

i've had it up to here...

i've had enough of all the bitter lies i've had enough of all the local spies i've had enough of all comitting suicide i've had enough and now the anger dies i've had enough of living life out loud i've had enough pretending i'm a cloud i've had enough of dealing with the proud stop...

religion teaching me how to feel
there are lies thrown at me from the age of three there must be something better in this life than suicide i've had it up to here...
