Every night he sits there on that barstool
A heart broke fool
Add a little bit after one, the barkeep says
Now, son you know the rules
But he can't stand up
But he tries, as he replies

What will you do when too much ain't enough
When you can't pass out
And you can't pick yourself up
How do you face these lonely lonely nights
Without one single piece of your mind
And you're out of luck
And you've had too much
And too much ain't enough

Too many nights I watched him from the corner booth
When I should be with you
Girl tonight he turned around and made me face the truth
Said what will you do
Oh, when she gives up
When you go home and you find her gone

What will you do when too much ain't enough
When you can't pass out
And you can't pick yourself up
How do you face these lonely lonely nights
Without one single piece of your mind
And you're out of luck
Cause you've had too much
And too much ain't enough

What will you do when too much ain't enough
When you can't pass out
And you can't pick yourself up
How do you face these lonely lonely nights
Without one single piece of your mind
And you're out of luck
Cause you've had too much
And too much ain't enough

Too much ain't enough
Too much ain't enough
