Dancing on the scales
It's like she doesn't know how long she's played this game
Gliding through a moment
She keeps everything we know in the same place
And if she'd let things go, maybe her peace would follow

In my life I like to push things
Always there to open up that door
Half the time I'm going nowhere
Something in me tells me that there's more
More
A balance, in all of us, so delicate
A balance we don't know enough of to disturb
And if I'd let things go, maybe my peace would follow
But something in me needs to go just a little further

Well, it will always be there
What we take comes from somewhere
So don't disturb her
Yeah, it will always be there
What we take comes from somewhere
So don't disturb her

If we'd just let things go, maybe our peace would follow
But something in us needs to go just a little further And if we'd let things go, maybe our peace would follow

Dancing on the scales
