Is it safe to say we've been dying since we were born?
I'm not afraid of that sad truth anymore
With a case of the careless and a scratch on your skin
There's a time, there's a place this will all begin
Just one more stick, yeah, one more sting
Just a bit of your stomach down in the sink
And you say "it's okay, it's just another day to me"
You can't say you're naked with all those clothes
You can't call it the truth if nobody knows
The more you sleep the more you live for free
So let go, let go mother now let go
Step back, step back father now step back
There's mistletoe on her doorway
She's alone tonight, but it's okay
It's hard to understand but now
She's finally getting what she wants
The windows are broken but we still have a home
We just can't expect to keep very warm
And if you pray, than pray that there's no storm
And I know, and I know we're just broken people
Trying to find something that is real
Today's just so hard to get around
Hold me back or push me away
I'll never win these games we play
But one of these days we'll see what you have done
So let go, let go mother now let go
Step back, step back father now step back
Let go, let go mother now let go
Step back, step back father now step back
