"Lifetime In The Rain"

I understand the night's last call for another star.
I watch it fall Cast atop a wish I give, together we alone.
I piece together love's last joy and ask myself is it worth the void?
Half a feeling away the more I scream to say.
I'd rather spend a lifetime,
I'd rather spend a lifetime in the rain.

The more I think about it, the more and more I see
How this misery could be what I need.
At times I often wish you were here by me,
How this misery could be what I need.

On a night where creatures talk, a lifetime's death or a moment's lost,
I think I'd mean the world to you if I could just believe in myself.
As we gaze a sky so dark, I think about my heart that's lost.
Half the shine, and I say:
I'd rather spend a lifetime in the rain.

Can you find the good inside this blackened heart of mine?
Or will you change and follow love's dismay?
