Wake up

Don't you know who I am

Waiting for heaven in this familiar place

Holding tightly to a familiar waste

Never thought I'd go this far

Never thought life could get this hard

And I could be waiting,

I'm waiting half way down

Never lived, never loved, never realized

I left a lot of lies and now I,

Could I be failing half way down

It's always push or pull

Because I'm fighting for a life I know

Wake up

Don't you know I am

I keep breaking, keep breaking down

You know that I keep breaking

Breaking down

And I could be waiting,

I'm waiting half way down

Never lived, never loved, never realized

I left a lot of lies and now I,
Could I be failing half way down
It's always push or pull
Because I'm fighting for a life I know

I never realized, left a lot of lies
I keep breaking down

What's the verdict if I'm so faithless

Don't you know who I am

(With the weight of the world and the way that life turns trying to make my voice heard don't you know who I)

Wake up

Don't you know who I am
