My spirit left my body while I slept and took a seat in a small café overlooking the river And in a small café overlooking the river, my spirit relaxed and drank a cappuccino and then another And my spirit borrowed a cigarette and smoked it and watched it disappear
And my spirit rose
And on it's way out, paused before the ride board And reading it, my spirit was moved and fell to it's knees and wept
And sang of the ride board it's praises in a loud voice
