"The Greatest Need"

Can't we hear the hurting they are asking Where is there good in this world
We've seen it in print but there's no one to show it Will you understand you're not the only ones who suffer
And suffer we will
The cutting wind has it's way of killing hope when it's so cold
We wonder as we sit around could we be meant for something greater There's no hope for change when we can't see the needs of others before our own And now must our faces be set as stone Always forcing us against each other So let us be the first to stand and say but not as if we were faultless
That we can't move on unless we forgive
We can forgive
We have to let it go It's the arrogance we have to let it go
This is our greatest need Will we reject the ones we see who have the greatest need
