Raise the battle-axe unto their skulls in the bliss of spilling blood on enemy soil.

Towards the synagogue,
with thirst for Semite blood...
From a trail of churches Burning.

Under the Haunting Moon,
with sword in hand I ride and I exalt the horns of battle
towards the sky.

I slay the souls of the Jesuit creed,
and bathe in their curdled blood.

Forsaken, their armies fell.
Those who died did not die a quick death.
They would drown in their brother's blood,
at my feet upon battle ground. Victory shall be ours,
as we march to battle drums.
