So many times I have left you believing we were through
And everytime I have ended up crying like a baby over you Sometimes you just try to hard to make things new Everything feels all right, the next day we are breaking up in two
And the I've turned around to see if you would follow
But all I could see were birds leaving ground Now I got these questions pounding like a hammer to my head
Would you trust me again enough to still be around

I would never hurt you, Jennie
No matter what would happen I'd be right behind
Never desert you, Jennie
But my love will make a fine fine wrinkle round your eye

Sometimes we are so afraid of living, can't breathe holding too tight
I know you can feel it too, and then it's up to me and you to make it right So here we are with nothing to say a silence as deep as the winter night But then we touch and it all blows away and we lie down and hide from the morning light

I would never hurt you, Jennie
No matter what would happen I'd be right behind
Never desert you, Jennie
But my love will make a fine fine wrinkle round your eye
