Maybe I was wrong
Maybe I was looking in all the wrong places
Maybe I was wrong
Maybe I was searching in all the wrong places

If I knew that you were coming for me,
I would have stayed in one place
If I knew that you were coming for me,
I would have made my peace

Maybe I was wrong
Maybe I was dreamless and full of suffering
Maybe I was wrong
Every time you said you loved me I went running on my own

But I can see you now
I'm coming home
I can see you now
I'm coming home

Maybe I was wrong
Maybe I was looking at all the wrong faces
Maybe I was wrong
Maybe I was searching in all the wrong places

If I knew that you were coming for me,
I would have stayed in one place
If I knew that you were coming for me,
I would have made my peace

But I can see you now
I'm coming home
I can see you now
I'm coming home

I have my life in my own hands
I journey through the promise land
Taking what I can and never looking back
But I fell so far so fast
And all the years of moving past you in the crowd

Are catching up at last
And there you are looking at me with eyes full of love
Giving me another chance to come home and dance
I make my peace now
I throw the pain down
Walk towards the light and thank the world
Before I say goodnight
