If I walk down this hallway, tonight,
It's too quiet,
So I Pad through the dark and call you on the phone Push your old numbers and let your house ring til I wake you ghost.
Let him walk down your hallway it's not this quiet slide down your receiver sprint across the wire follow my number slide into my hand.

It's the blaze across my nightgown it's the phone's ring.

I think last night
you were driving circles around me.

I can't drink this coffee til I put you in my closet let him shoot me down let him call me off I take it from his whisper you're not that tough.
