

Dan Swano

"In Empty Phrases"

Visit "In Empty Phrases" on MotoLyrics.com

Here I am in my chamber
In my room full of words
Always searching for patterns that will give life to a line
My poetry is frozen though it's beginning to melt
The solid form is changing to the liquid of thoughts written down
Sentence after sentence in a language not mine
Loss of point no direction
A jigsaw where no pieces fit
I envy the writers and the Ä°Ä¸Ä¸ts who know
The way to the places where poetry grows
There is no harvest if you never sow
So I beg. steal and borrow wherever I go
If words were like music this would be a book
But this is not even worth the time that it took
Not even a novel just a self-pity tale
Written by someone that always will fail
So very fragile inside
That's why I hide in the empty phrases

Visit Dan Swano page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.