Finger of light reaches through the red curtain
High on the rooftop, greeting [a? is?] Sun
Lying beside me, secure in your dreamworld
A glow on your face from the light of the Sun

Gently the morning begins its intrusion
Enters the mind with a hesitant hum
Images move within eyes not yet open
Telling the senses a new day has come

And the warmth from the light through the window
Signals a new world's begun

Let the Sun come into your life
Bring in the Sun

If you see it shine in the morning time
Your day is [won? one?]

Let the Sun come into your life
Bring in the Sun
Bring in the Sun

Hours of flying, wheels in motion
[--?] for living steadily done (it's done)
I fight for a moment to see your reflection
To picture your face in the soft morning Sun

But the warmth from the light through the window
Signals a new world's begun

[chorus]
