oh country you bloody old miser shake off the ancient dust of your heartless fathers and rain pounds upon Tyne upon Tweed upon the daylight darlings, sweating to keep you upright how I love to leave you crooning your songs mooning away the time to stretch farther while he chased the lovely tails of youth turned soft and holy makes loose the leashes and lashes of this cracked armor

all skin and bones and no home born alone only to end me alone
your words digest space cruising red hot swollen lines tight nights awake pushing forth bring me blue, answering lashes and eyes we grow long hard limbs protecting our colors from each other burned hollow

all skin and bones and no where to go
