We pledge allegiance to the kids pushing for a new direction, our hearts goes out to everyone who follows theirs, admits mistakes, makes corrections. We'll never attain perfection but our goals are set on self-improvement, we might not change the world today, but every step we take is a movement. We've all got our distances, how you gonna get there if you're not running. And over your shoulder's not the direction the future's coming. We've got youth, energy, we're keeping the faith, nothing can slow us down, if you don't budge, we won't break. Let's call each other on our shit, don't hesitate to let me know- let's get beyond the media blitz and start to help each other grow. Consider constructive criticism, give each other their due cred, life's hard so be hard as well, follow your heart but use your head. I opened my eyes and it was morning, the sun was shining bright against my wall. The window cracked, the air was cool and fresh like the ocean, UC on the stereo
