Hey, boy
All you wanted
You will have

Hey, boy, the dreams
you hold now
You will grab

It doesn't look too good tonight

noone's
going to make you feel alright

The ones you want will leave you and your friends will run away you'll find you didn't need them but that won't comfort you today the way you are frustrates them

'cos when it hurts you tell the truth but noone's going to love you for providing them the proof

Hey, boy
You're right when you say It doesn't get much worse than this

it tears as much
the second time
and more the third
the fourth the fifth

I won't pretend
and I won't lie you'll lose that sparkle in your eye

but you'll look back in broader times

and miss the simple life

Just let the red lights Sing to you

Breakbeats, pain and basslines Will see you through

if you are nothing then what am I?

and when you're cold
and when you're tired I'll hold you

the price you pay for becoming indestructible

the life you lose
for becoming
the king of "fuck you all"

is that you never sleep again

and we will never sleep

again
