(lyrics & music: Kay Hartung)

On every day there was war
And every man kills on and on
The price for these men, a place by God
But nobody's god did understand
Who said killing was the key to paradise
Who said killing was the law
Who said killing was the bridge to milk and honey
Who said my name was war?

Colored boy a mistake
Red indian, a damned guy
White is the truth don't forget
Look all around, it's white man's world
Who said killing was the key to paradise
Who said killing was the law
Who said killing was the bridge to milk and honey
Who said my name was war?
