Sometimes
Life is a strange dream
And sometimes it may even seem
Like a familiar nightmare, but it's just not clear
When honor is sold, so wallets can grow fatter
And egos grow bold, hey what does it matter

If impotent politics go cold
Oh my little lion
Let them be with their lying, their cheating and crying
Time will tell all, and time can fly away
So what does it matter anyway?
Life is a novel unwritten
An eternal fairy tale, both dark and pale
Yeah my little kitten
Farewell to love
'Cause I'm just not smitten
Whether life is too short, or life is too long
I don't have the answers, but I wish I knew less
'Cause sometimes life is a sad happiness
Oh my little lamb, whichever way it goes
On this fickle wheel of fate
However the die is cast forever after now
Just don't make me wait
In far away places
The sun rises over the horizon
Memories fall like autumn leaves
Buds of hope grow, eternally poetic translation by Cherie Coley
