When was the last time I remembered all you did for me?

And when will I give you back all that you need?

But you're not looking for what others see in me

For my soul isn't part of my anatomy

Someone give me a real heart

For out of an artificial one I bleed

You put in me a new mindset

So a traitor's death I did not receive

All of you running for one prize

But you're all left behind

All of you reaching for one glass that will poison

Don't you realize your forever might leave you tomorrow?

And don't you realize that you're gaining less with each pill that you swallow?

And even your plans are held in His hands

So we'll wait till you fall apart again

All of you running for one prize

But you're all left behind

All of you reaching for one glass that will poison

Broken into pieces by mistakes I've made

Strengthened by these pieces learning more each day

You taught me lessons from my mistakes

Which built me up stronger today

Now please take these pieces and throw them all away

Don't turn you back on me now

All of you running for one prize

But you're all left behind

All of you reaching for one glass that will poison
