Taking his sword, riding his horse, he's arming himself with courage and with faith

Ready to go, ready to fight, saying goodbye to his wife and his family

Finally gone to search the beast, he'll travel as far as he can

Looking for the great monster through many valleys

Smelling burned bodies and ashes around lakes and woods

Asking if someone has seen it somewhere

Opening the hunt everywhere, taking his sword in hand

Approaching the lair more and more again, ready to battle

Finding finally the dragon's lair, getting down of his horse and taking his shield in hand

Slay the dragon

The beast was not in its lair, so he traveled so far for nothing

He asked himself why he didn't find the monster

Praising his Lord, taking courage, to finally find the great monster and slay it

Taking his sword, taking his shield, he must arm himself with courage and with faith

Wearing his helm, calling his horse, finally sure of his quest

Riding his horse, raising his sword, screaming while he watches the sky upon him

Ready to go, ready to fight, releasing his mind of the doubt and the fear

Finally gone to search the beast, he'll travel again and again

Looking for the great monster through many valleys

Smelling burned bodies and ashes around lakes and
woods

Opening the hunt everywhere, taking his sword in hand

Finding finally the dragon's lair, getting down of his
horse and taking his shield in hand

Slay the dragon

He found the dragon and the battle began

The beast was more scary than his worse nightmares

But he wasn't afraid and he launched the charge

He was trying to hurt the creature in vain

After a long fight he reached its weak point

The battle has ended and he get back to his town

To show the dragon's head to his Lord

(Revelation 12:7-11)
