Thirteen days from now a jet will set you down at summer's end Separating by miles of empty sky me from my friend A regular goodbye won't do at all so I will write your address down I'll send thoughts across like morse code lines and dots to your new hometown Your effect on me is too deep to state

I'll write it on my arm with a permanent pen
The stain will stay for days Will its meaning ever end?

Your life is breaking open Streams of words unspoken wash over my brain as I watch your wings,

young and unfolding,
carry you away
This blurry feeling is hard to state

Though we never said love, it hung in the air
Now the feelings are fading along with your name
