Plunged in bitterness,
Seduced by an ocean of disconcertment
Carrying an everlasting smile with insouciance Cultivating this disconnection with every single interaction

You won't lure me any further I've been drinking too much shadow and now maybe I shall blossom
This misconception of human loneliness must be disregarded

I will stare at life like I never did before This game is useless and everything so deceptive My ambitions may look low but so is the price, I cannot win
What's the meaning of this precious souvenir?
Suppress these feelings

Forget the man you were Even if we both know that you'd rather be unloved and...
Forget the man you were Nameless than be fictively surrounded

Carrying an everlasting smile with insouciance
I honestly know that demons will not hear me scream and angels won't see me cry Isolation is in fact the only thing I require No false promises await in my nightmares
Nothing, except my own predestined downfall Look at this smile and think I'm cheerful like you always were
