(Bill)

Back home a lot of people will ask us when we have made our over seas tours. If we do anything different when we perform overseas. And I am reminded of the story of the very first time that I ever came to Great Britain. And everybody told me "Bill when you go on stage don't do any of your narration's. Don't do any of your talking records." And that scared me because that's about all I know how to do. When we get to a very difficult part in a song and I can't sing it, then I stop and recite it. See that's what I have done for years. I guess maybe it is still a little strange when you're not used to it. A newspaper reporter over here wrote in a news paper onetime. He said "Bill Anderson has a curious little habit of pausing in the middle of his songs to recite little poems. Some of which would make a greeting card blush."

But I have to tell you just about the most requested song that I have when I come over here is a narration. It's a story and I would like to share it with you tonight.

It's called The Golden Guitar.
