(Watt Watkins - Ruth Wilkinson)

The Gods were angry with me for loving you
The Gods were angry with me because they knew
I stood at heaven's portal but they were too high
For any mortal such as I.

And so they took down the sun the skies were gray
And then the howling winds took you away
And there was nothing I could do for I could see
It was because the Gods were angry with me.

And so they took down the sun the skies were gray
And then the howling winds took you away
And there was nothing I could do for I could see
It was because the Gods were angry with me.

And there was nothing I could do for I could see
It was because the Gods were angry with me...
