I once thought that I would know the time just to give it up
You hold more than you think you do but you're letting go the best thing you have But you don't hold on

And breaking hold doesn't last If all the times we let it drop we didn't die just a little bit
The things we love the most
But you break once it settles down
You hurt, and you hate the thought of 'never again'
You said you wouldn't break
But you hold onto the light that's left

It rains down but you take the chance or you just regret that you gave it up So you just hold on

And I won't be able to let this die
I can't just forget this moment in my life
And I won't be made to lose the light
I don't want to forget, to live with regret

Lost; you couldn't change how the morals fail
You couldn't change how we fall
I hate to be the one to watch if we fade away.
