Here I am, I'm wide awake
I'm right here for you to take
But you see right through me
And I have nothing left to embrace
As dark falls, so do I
The night wraps around me like
The cemeteries for the unknown military of the Reich
I can't believe what I've become to you, just another face
What I think and I say, it really doesn't matter
What I think and I say
What I think and I say, it really doesn't matter
I sit alone today and hope that you will come for me
again
In solitude with hardwood floors
And windows revealing skies so gray
I hang my paintings as a final thought to motion you my way
Once I swam, but now I sink
I'm desperate for your voice, I need I need to reconcile the things you left undone between you and me

I can't believe what I've become to you, just another
face
What I think and I say, it really doesn't matter
What I think and I say
What I think and I say, it really doesn't matter
I sit alone today and hope that you will come for me
again
What I think and I say, it really doesn't matter
What I think and I say
What I think and I say, it really doesn't matter
I sit alone today and hope that you will comfort me
And then you told me you were gone
Without speaking at all you left me in my head Wrapped around the night with you
And this is our last call with no notice at all
You left me in my bed alone
