Screamn whitewall tires and a guitar by his side Billys got the fever as he rolls on thru the night
Some were born to listen, some were born to play He was lightning on the highstrings and thunder on the bass

Chorus

He could play it high, he could play it low
He could make it cry, he could make it moan
He knows when push comes to shove
The proofs in the pickin

In a smoky little tavern just off of bourbon street Tobacco stained fingers waited on the down beat Conley was the master, the undisputed king Hed ruled the town for thirty years
With an army of six strings

Chorus

Sometimes after midnight billy drives through new orleans
Straight to the french quarter there's a man he has to see
The music is a raging like a city that's on fire Billy felt just like an altar boy at the feet of a higher power
Conley watched as billy walked across the room Opened his case and started a tune The whole club was silent and the lights were turned down low
Billy stepped up on the stage and conley whispered go son, go

Chorus

Conley held his hand up, no one made a sound And he handed bill his old archtop and stepped into the crowd
Billy played it soft, billy played it sad
Then he made it talk and in came the band

Soon the room was shaking before billys wall of sound And just a block off bourbon street, a new kings been crowned.

Chorus
