Out beyond the broken billboards
And the signs along the road
There's a trail your heart must follow
No one but you could ever know

Where the winds and the coyote
Sing a song you've never heard
From a place that's long forgotten
And you'll remember every word

In a world that's always changing
Find the things that stay the same
Like the moon and stars that guide you
Out across the sweeping plains

Keep your eye on the horizon
When you cross that great divide
All you have is what's inside you
When you take that lonesome ride

Forever ride, forever ride

Go to sleep now little brother
Dream of red tails in the west
I know until you find your way there
Your crazy soul will never rest

We'll chase the horses in the springtime
When the desert flowers bloom
You may never hear my footsteps
But I will always be with you

In a world that's always changing
Find the things that stay the same
Like the moon and stars that guide you
Out across the sweeping plains

Keep your eye on the horizon
When you cross that great divide
All you have is what's inside you
When you take that lonesome ride

Forever ride, forever ride
Forever ride, forever ride
Forever ride, forever ride
Forever ride, forever ride
