Coyote

by Bill Staines

Here in the dawn

You got me listenin' to your song once again.

I love how it climbs and it hangs upon the wind.

Here in the dawn

You got me dreamin' to your song once again.

We all get to dreamin' now and then

So that's all right, coyote, my old friend.

Cho: How come you call so lonesome?

How come you sound so blue?

Is there somethin' inside

That you just can't hide?

Has somethin' come over you?

That's all right, we all get lonesome too.

Here in the dawn

You got me listenin' to your song once again;

I love how it climbs and it hangs upon the wind.

Here in the dawn

You got me cryin' to your song once again

We all get to losin' now and then

So that's all right, coyote, my old friend

Cho.
