Piece by piece
everything falls apart..

yet I am still here clinging to my dignity what else is left but to believe in some kind of change? the storm may come and decimate all I've worked to create but I will forge some meaning in this suffering from peak to peak

through the valleys in between transcend the pain, make light of our misery always grasping for some certainty one promise proven true just to soothe my inner frailty helpless against the elements, yet I keep fragile hope inside determined to make myself worthy of...

our human plight!

transcend the pain, make light of our misery

dear mother, hide your children's eyes no longer perhaps we were born just to suffer carving out each hollowed day until the wings of fleeting time
carry us away...
