Loose cannons fire as they target shades of gray
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break
your skull
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break
your skull
Loose cannons fire as they target shades of gray Nevermind a mind that never evolves from the medieval
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break
your skull
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break
your skull

Damage is far greater than you ever could imagine Then when you pump your seed full of sewage If you need someone to hate just look into a mirror
There you'll see who will be buried six feet down Buried six feet down, You're dead and buried

Ignorance breeds ignorance, breeds hatred and decay Morals and sympathies start to fade Nevermind a mind that never looks to find the truth Just hold your breath until you turn blue, and never exhale

I'll bide my time, for you to cross the line, cross the line, all it takes is time Bide my time, for you to cross the line, cross the line and just trip the wire

You feel so justified in actions that you take, fabricating dishonest mistakes You reap what you sow, the burden that you bear will be inhumane but fair,
It will be fair, it will be fair

Loose cannons fire, as they target shades of gray Nevermind a mind that never evolves from the
medieval
Loose cannons fire, targeting shades of gray, loose cannons fire, targeting shades of gray Nevermind a mind that never evolves from the

medieval
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break
your skull
Damage is undamaged
